

Thu 3:40 PM

Subject:
Monopoly of Media Ownership

I wish to protest the possible consolidation of radio and TV stations into a few conglomerates.

Since the communication resources of our nation belong to United States citizens, I expect them to remain free and varied as to content. The Federal Communications Commission is beholden to me and other citizens to see that media resources do not become propaganda tools for one point of view, and that local stations are not controlled by one conglomerate.

Censorship and controlled content of information does not have a part in free press/speech. In any future considerations as to license ownership, I expect the FCC to keep in mind that they are serving all U.S. citizens, not companies which seek power in communicating one point-of-view.

A look back at the Iraq war coverage is a good example of what happens when major networks all show us the same made-for-TV extravagandas, Hollywood-John Wayne productions. Their interest in the war was to improve their ratings, to out-fox Fox. War is not an heroic, statue-destructing, flag-waving event -- the troops and civilians killed and maimed, do not get up and play another role another day. But the major networks all gave us the same pablum with little of the reality which might have caused us to think about the realities of war.

I have informed my Senators and Representative as to my concerns about FCC licensing shortcomings. I would like the FCC to remember that they are my watchdog over the media, and I expect them to do their job conscientiously and fairly.

Jeanette Rolfe Grandstaff

Thu 3:40 PM

I wish to protest the consolidation of radio and TV stations into a few conglomerates.

Since the communication resources of our nation belong to United States citizens, I expect them to remain free and varied as to content. The Federal Communications Commission is beholden to me and other citizens to see that media resources do not become propaganda tools for one point of view, and that local stations are not controlled by a few conglomerates.

Censorship and controlled content of information does not have a part in a free press/speech. In any future considerations as to license ownership, I expect the FCC to keep in mind that they are serving all U.S. citizens, not companies which seek power in communicating one point of view.

A look back at the Iraq war coverage is a good example of what happens when major networks all show us the same made-for-TV extravagandas, Hollywood-John Wayne productions. Their interest in the war was to improve their ratings, to out-fox Fox. War is not an heroic, statue-destructing, flag-waving event -- the troops and civilians killed and maimed, do not get up and play another role another day. But the major networks all gave us the same pabulum with little of the reality which might have caused us to think about the realities of war.

I have informed my Senators and Representative as to my concerns about FCC licensing shortcomings. I would like the FCC to remember that they are my watchdog over the media, and I expect them to do their job conscientiously and fairly.

Jeanette Rolfe Grandstaff